

With the fight against COVID-19 becoming the single most important global issue, respiratory therapists demonstrated their importance to the healthcare system.

As the leader in community respiratory therapy in Ontario, ProResp has proudly worked to promote the role of, and give a voice to, the respiratory therapist during the pandemic.

While the pandemic affected virtually every part of our lives and left many people isolated, ProResp's RTs maintained patient connections through in person and virtual visits, following provincial directives and guidelines.

Our respiratory therapists remain committed to helping people breathe, and improving quality of life.
